Sonja Davies Peace Award 2021

Award	One award of up to $4000
Open	1 March to 15 April
Awards advised	June
Awards made	July to early August

Purpose of the award

The Sonja Davies Peace Award was set up to remember the contribution of Sonja Davies, trade unionist, first woman member of the Federation of Labour Executive, founder of the Working Women's Council and Labour MP. Sonja Davies was the author of Bread and Roses, a fascinating political autobiography that was later made into a movie. She died in 2005 at the age of 81.

The Sonja Davies Peace Award promotes initiatives that advance peace in New Zealand. The award is available to a woman or group led by a woman who are developing an initiative that will help them create a more peaceful world – at home, school, the workplace, or in the community.

Peace is defined as the elimination of violence within families, lessening conflict between groups within society, freedom from civil disorder, and cessation of war. It extends to activities which foster mediation or resolution of conflict by means other than violence.
